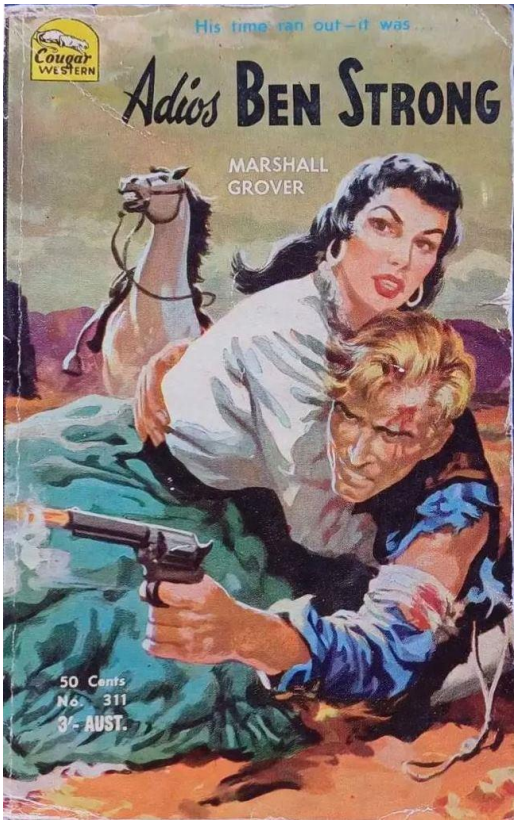
Listing and dating Cleveland Publishing's two Cougar paperback series

Anders N. Nilsson, Nordmaling, Sweden
[Version: 13 February 2026]

Introduction

Cleveland and Horwitz were the two major pulp and comics publishers in Australia in the 2nd half of the 2000th Century (Bode 2012, Johnson-Woods 2012). Looking at western novels, Cleveland's many series of novel magazines dominated the market at least into the 70's, although the move of the popular author Leonard F. Meares to Horwitz, behind series such as Larry & Stretch and Big Jim, was a major blow for Cleveland in the late 60's. Both these series got started in Cleveland's paperback line Cougar. When taking a closer look at the dating of Cleveland's western novel magazines, I did note that the Cougar paperbacks did differ in some important aspects (Nilsson 2026), although they shared the absence of printed dates. First, they were slightly more expensive, most likely because of their 130 or 146 pages, compared to the standard 98 pages of the novel magazines. Second, the prices printed on the front covers did not appear to follow some sequential increase over time. Moreover, their serial numbering seemed quite complex as the books with the lowest numbers did not display the most obsolete cover layout. It was not until I did separate the Cougar paperbacks into two different series, with a parallell publication, that most of these anomalies could be resolved. Cougar Western was the oldest series, starting with book #301, already in the 50's, whereas Cougar Books did not get started until the mid 60's with book #101. A pattern in great contrast to the one shown by Cleveland's novel magazine flagship Cleveland Western, which up to #532 is referred to as Cleveland Books that then changed its name to Cleveland Western with a continuous numbering sequence (AustLit 2026). In both cases the "Books" series mixed different genres, whereas the "Western" series as the name says only included westerns. After separating the two Cougar series, I will here list their titles and suggest a model for their dating based primarily on the prices printed on the front covers.



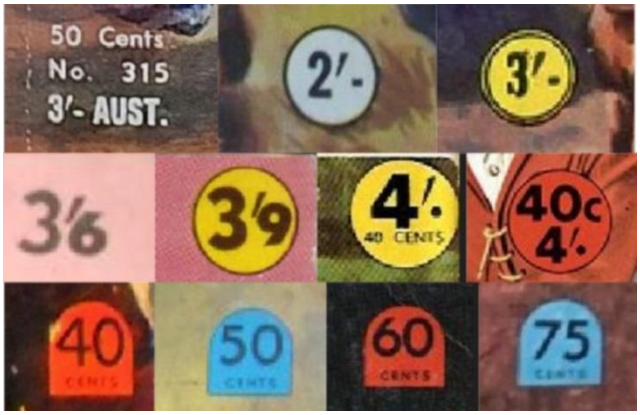
Cougar Western #311 is the oldest one I've seen so far. Note the dual price suggesting export to Canada.

Dating and printed prices

My Cougar studies used the same methods as described in my work on dating the novel magazines (Nilsson 2026). Moreover, many Cougar titles were found in the Taylor Collection list (University of Melbourne 2004). When comparing the printed prices on the paperbacks with those of the novel magazines, my assumption was that the former were about 1.5 to 2 times more expensive. The only New Zealand price observed on a paperback, 60c / NZ 70c on Cougar Western #758, was supposed to match the 40c / NZ 50c on the magazines. One observed anomaly was the 50 Cents / 3'- AUST. observed on Cougar Western #311-315. As this dual price was dated to the 50's it is not connected to the money changeover years, and my guess is that these editions were exported to Canada where they were sold at 50 Cents. The same explanation covers also the seemingly isolated 25 Cents / 2'- AUST. on book #326, an Australian edition of an American title. The Australian editions of British or American titles found in both Cougar series were of some use in the dating as not possibly being older than the original editions. Matching Australian editions with the originals used was also secured by matching the cover art.

A suggested dating of the Cougars

The outcome of my dating model is shown in Table 1. Two paperback series with 32 annual titles each may seem much indeed. The main evidence is that if a synchronisation of their prices is assumed, then the two money changeover years in Australia with dual prices printed on the covers correspond to at least 59 books in each series, Cougar Western #504-562 and Cougar Books #148-192, respectively. The annual numbers are seemingly compatible with the 16 titles per month from Cleveland in 1973, as stated by Les Atkins in an interview (Burns 2018).



Price labels seen printed on the front covers of the studied Cougar paperbacks.

Cougar Books

Cougar Books was initially a genre-mixed series including romance, war, crime, and western stories. After book #132, however, all titles were westerns. The seven first titles in the series are reprints from British Badger Books, an imprint of John Spencer & Co. All remaining titles had Australian authors. With few exceptions, all western titles were reprints from Cleveland Westerns, first published 1956-1959. Cougar Books included at least 108 titles, numbered from 101 to 208. According to my estimates, they were published between 1964 and 1968. With few exceptions, the front page Cougar logo did not include the word "western", and the presence of this word on books #133-136 and 189 is viewed as editorial mistakes. The known titles are listed in Appendix 1, and a selection of covers scans in Appendix 3.

Cougar Western

As the first title known of Cougar Western is #304, this series started seemingly with #301. The highest number noted is #810, corresponding to 510 published books in the series. Of the Cougar Western titles seen seven are American, whereas the rest are from Australian authors. The last American title was seemingly #377 by Bradford Scott. With few exceptions, the Australian titles included up to book #539 were seemingly first editions, including many titles of Marshall Grover's popular subseries Larry & Stretch and Big Jim. From book #540 all titles were reprints, first from Cleveland Western and thereafter from Cougar Western, almost all of them from Marshall Grover's two mentioned subseries. Many titles were reprinted more than once within the series, often in an about every hundred title cycle. According to my estimates, the Cougar Westerns were published between 1956 and 1975, thus starting before and ending after Cougar Books. The known titles are listed in Appendix 2, and a selection of covers scans in Appendix 3.

More titles and evidence needed

As many of the Cougar books have became really rare, I ask for help in filling in the missing titles. It is my hope that those sitting on additional information will share what they have, and more cover scans are highly appreciated. My dating model is for sure more precise than my data support. Still, I prefer to suggest exact years for all titles instead of intervals, as a bolder hypothesis is more open for falsification. Hopefully, those interested in finding a firmer base for dating will dig up some decisive information from the archives.
